An evening to remember

Last night I had an extremely (0) entertained / entertaining evening at Kenji, the new Teppanyaki restaurant on Feltbury High Street. Teppanyaki is a traditional Japanese way of cooking, in which the chef prepares and cooks the food right there in front of you.

The chefs are very skilled and it's (1) amazed / amazing to watch them work. They make a real show of it – ours even started juggling with his knives, which was a bit (2) frightened / frightening. One or two of the chefs are also comedians. Ours kept us (3) amused / amusing all evening. The food was very fresh and beautifully cooked.

The atmosphere of the restaurant varies depending on where you sit. At the front, it's very lively and noisy. But there are a couple of tables at the back where you can have a quiet meal.

I do have one or two small complaints. Some of the people in our party were vegetarians and they were a bit (4) disappointed / disappointing to find there were so few dishes on the menu for them. Also, although the service was friendly, there weren't really enough waiters. We had to wait ages to get our drinks. But none of us complained as we were feeling so (5) relaxed / relaxing and happy. I can highly recommend a visit to Kenji's – you'll have an evening to remember.

3 Read the review again and choose the correct quantifier for the sentences below.

6 Complete the conversation. What does David say to Sally?

Sally: Look! We've received an invitation to my old school friend's wedding in France! I'd love to see her again. Shall we go?

David: (0) D

Sally: We don't have to fly. We could drive. That way we'll be able to see more of the country.

David: (1) _____

Sally: I'd forgotten. How about taking the train?

David: (2) _____

Sally: Why don't we take a day or two off work then? We could have a little holiday while we're there.

David: (3) _____

Sally: Oh, I love Paris. It'll be beautiful at that time of year.

David: (4) _____

Sally: Yes. I can't wait!

A: Oh, I don't think that's a good idea. You know I get car sick on long journeys.

B: Shall I book the tickets then?

C: That's not a bad idea, but it's still a lot of money for just one day's trip.

D: Well, I'm not sure. Can we afford to fly to France?

E: What a good idea! It's ages since we last went away. What about going to Paris?
